women around the world. In "Light & Luminous," a gifted instructor of Indian dance falls victim to the vanity and insecurities that have followed her into middle age. In "Tonto and the Undertaker," a widower copes with his loss by cruising Kentucky highways and burying roadkill. In "The Scriptological Review" a damaged young man obsessively studies his father's handwriting in hopes of making sense of his suicide. And in "What to Do with Henry," a white woman from Ohio takes in the illegitimate child her husband left behind in Sierra Leone, as well as an orphaned chimpanzee who comes to anchor this strange new family. With Aerogrammes, Tania James once again introduces us to a host of delicate, complicated, and beautifully realized characters who find themselves separated from their friends, families, and communities by race, pride, and grief. Additionally, by integrating a combination of selected vocabulary words for an in-book "Spelling Bee", along with short sentences using powerful adjectives, Walton aims to teach young Black Kings the importance of spelling, and how it simultaneously benefits their reading competency.

Furthermore, Melanin Spelling Bee King's has various inspiring and educational elements that will progressively shape the mind, self-esteem, and overall cognitive behavior of young black readers. Thus, Walton's chief concern is to prevent young boys born into the African diaspora from encountering avoidable educational setbacks pertaining to their social and intellectual development.
